

A blue spot in a red place

This election, the voters Indiana's 9th Congressional District will have a voice in two federal elections, the Presidential election and the race for the District's House of Representatives seat. The District, which has changed shape over the years, has Monroe County as a blue outlier in a red region, with significantly less people in most of the other counties — a look back at 2016 and the most recently available registered voter numbers gives some context for how Tuesday might go, locally.

REGISTERED VOTERS BY COUNTY

As of June 2, 2020

